

Originals sent to Robert Amory

4/7/59

articles dated March 25

Circ.: e. 5,769

S. 5,769

Front Page
Edit Page
Other Page

Date:

COPYRIGHT

Washington Window

CIA Aide Says Nikita Just Hoping West 'Chickens Out'

COPYRIGHT

By EYLE C. WILSON

United Press International
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Robert Amory Jr. probably is the second-best or third-best informed American on what the Russian Communists are doing, thinking and planning.

Amory is deputy chief for intelligence of the Central Intelligence Agency. CIA is the United States spy apparatus or, in more polite language, it is a counter intelligence organization.

This well informed American was making a speech the other day in Columbia, S.C. Amory's speech did not get the publicity it deserved despite the fact that what he had to say was pretty good news for U.S. citizens.

His story was that the Soviet Union is neither ready nor preparing for a war; that the Kremlin does not want a war although Communist Russia would fight if it must. Amory said the Russian leaders decided 18 months ago that their Communist economy had to have 15 years of peace to achieve their internal development plans.

Not Ready for War

"Their economy is by no means mobilized for war or preparing for war," Amory said. "They strike a balance between military and other expenditures. Just as we do.

He believes the Soviet Union is not ready to risk a nuclear war over Berlin. Nikita Khrushchev, instead, thinks he can force the West to "chicken out."

"If the West is resolute," Amory said, then I believe that the Soviet Union will be the one to back down."

During the 15 years of peace which Amory is convinced the Soviet Union must have and urgently wants, the CIA expects the Kremlin to follow this general pattern:

—Play its "soft" diplomacy to the limit.

—Stand pat against all pressure in the areas now dominated by Communism.

—Insist either upon two-nation talks between the Soviet Union and the United States or demand that satellite powers sit beside Soviet conferees in numbers equal to the number of Allies sitting beside the Americans.

—Never Tame Them.

—Maintain as high pitch the work of trouble-making among the peoples of non-Communist nations.

—But professing this fifth column activity with some show of willingness to cooperate with governments over which the Kremlin exercises no control.

—Continue an effective foreign policy of "no strings" toward nations which neither are Communist allies nor expected to become allies.

Amory evidently believes events of the next 15 years largely will shape the long haul picture of the future, war or peace or what ever.

We face a race for leadership in the world against militant Communists with fervent faith," he said. We must never tempt them into a major military pith while letting down our strength (although) they haven't got what it takes rationally to challenge us this spring.

Amory said the Russian leaders had no doubts on the future. In a comparatively short time, they are confident that the Soviet Union will be tops worldwide.

Front
PageEdit
PageOther
Page

Date:

Washington Window

CIA Aide Foresees No War

CPYRGHT
BY LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Robert Amory Jr. probably is the second-best or third-best informed American on what the Russian Communists are doing, thinking and planning.

Amory is deputy chief for intelligence of the Central Intelligence Agency, CIA, is the United States spy apparatus or, in more polite language, it is a counter-intelligence organization.

This well informed American was making a speech the other day in Columbia, S.C. Amory's speech did not get the publicity it deserved despite the fact that what he had to say was pretty good news for U.S. citizens.

His story was that the Soviet Union is neither ready nor preparing for a war; that the Kremlin does not want a war although Communist Russia would fight if it must. Amory said the Russian leaders decided 18 months ago that their Communist economy had to have 15 years of peace to achieve their internal development plans.

"Their economy is by no means mobilized for war or preparing for war," Amory said. "They strike a balance between military and other expenditures just as we do." He believes the Soviet Union is not ready to risk a nuclear war over Berlin. Nikita Khrushchev, instead, thinks he can force the West to "chicken out."

"If the West is resolute," Amory said, "then I believe that the Soviet Union will be the ones to back down."

During the 15 years of peace which Amory is convinced the Soviet Union must have and urgently wants, the CIA expects the Kremlin to follow this general pattern:

Play its Sputnik diplomacy to the limit.

Stand pat against all pressure in the areas now dominated by communism.

Insist either upon two-nation talks between the Soviet Union and the United States or demand that satellite powers sit beside Soviet conferees in numbers equal to the number of allies sitting beside the Americans.

Maintain at high pitch work of trouble-making among the peoples of non-Communist nations.

But softening this Fifth Column activity with some show of willingness to cooperate with governments over which the Kremlin exercises no control.

Continue an effective foreign policy of "no strings" foreign aid toward nations which neither are Communist allies nor expected to become allies.

Amory evidently believes events of the next 15 years largely will shape the long haul pattern of the future, war or peace or whatever.

"We face a race for leadership in the world against militant Communists with fervent faith," he said. "We must never tempt them into a major military path while letting down our strength (although) they haven't got what it takes rationally to challenge us this spring."

Amory said the Russian leaders had no doubts on the future. In a comparatively short time they are confident that the Soviet Union will be tops—worldwide.

CPYRGHT

Circ.: B. Approved For Release 2000/06/13 : CIA-RDP75-00001R000100190032-2
S. 25,674

Front Edit Other
Page Page Page

Date:

15 More Years Without War?

CIA Deputy Thinks That Fits Red Timetable

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press International

WASHINGTON, March 25 (UPI) — Robert Amory Jr. probably is the second-best or third-best informed American on what the Russian Communists are doing, thinking and planning.

Amory is deputy chief for intelligence of the Central Intelligence Agency. CIA is the United States spy apparatus or, in more polite language, it is a counter-intelligence organization.

This well informed American was making a speech the other day in Columbia, S. C. Amory's speech did not get the publicity it deserved despite the fact that what he had to say was pretty good news for U.S. citizens.

His story was that the Soviet Union is neither ready nor preparing for a war; that the Kremlin does not want a war although Communist Russia would fight if it must. Amory said the Russian leaders decided 18 months ago that their Communist economy had to have 15 years of peace to achieve their internal development plans.

"Their economy is by no means mobilized for war or preparing for war," Amory said. "They strike a balance between military and other expenditures just as we do."

He believes the Soviet Union is not ready to risk a nuclear war over Berlin. Nikita Khrushchev, instead, thinks he can force the West to "chicken out."

"If the West is resolute," Amory said, "then I believe that the Soviet Union will be the ones to back down."

During the 15 years of peace which Amory is convinced the Soviet Union must have and urgently wants, the CIA expects the Kremlin to follow this general pattern:

—Play its Sputnik diplomacy to the limit.

—Stand pat against all pressure in the areas now dominated by communism.

—Insist either upon two-nation talks between the Soviet Union and the United States or demand that satellite powers sit beside Soviet conferees in numbers equal to the number of Allies sitting beside the Americans.

—Maintain at high pitch the work of trouble-making among the peoples of non-Communist nations.

—But softening this fifth column activity with some show of willingness to cooperate with governments over which the Kremlin exercises no control.

—Continue an effective foreign policy or "no strings" foreign aid toward nations which neither are Communist allies nor expected to become allies.

Amory evidently believes events of the next 15 years largely will shape the long haul pattern of the future, war or peace or whatever.

"We face a race for leadership in the world against militant Communists with fervent faith," he said. "We must never tempt them into a major military path while letting down our strength (although) they haven't got what it takes rationally to challenge us this spring."

Amory said the Russian leaders had no doubts on the future. In a comparatively short time they are confident that the Soviet Union will be tops—world-wide.

MAR 25 1959

Approved For Release 2000/06/13 : CIA-RDP75-00001R000100190032-2

Circ.: 6, 24,294

COPYRIGHT

Front Page
Edit Page
Other Page

Date:

U.S. Intelligence Official Says Russia Not Preparing for War

By Lyle C. Wilson

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Robert Amory Jr. probably is the second-best or third-best informed American on what the Russian Communists are doing, thinking and planning.

Amory is deputy chief for intelligence of the Central Intelligence Agency. CIA is the United States spy apparatus or, in more polite language, it is a counter intelligence organization.

This well informed American was making a speech the other day in Columbia, S.C. Amory's speech did not get the publicity it deserved despite the fact that what he had to say was pretty good news for U. S. citizens.

His story was that the Soviet Union is neither ready nor preparing for a war; that the Kremlin does not want a war although Communist Russia would fight if it must. Amory said the Russian leaders decided 18 months ago that their Communist economy had to have 15 years of peace to achieve their internal development plans.

Not Ready for War

"Their economy is by no means mobilized for war or preparing for war," Amory said. "They strike a balance between military and other expenditures just as we do."

He believes the Soviet Union is not ready to risk a nuclear war over Berlin. Nikita Khrushchev, instead, thinks he can force the West to "chicken out."

"If the West is resolute," Amory said, "then I believe that the Soviet Union will be the one to back down."

During the 15 years of peace which Amory is convinced the Soviet Union must have and urgently wants, the CIA expects the Kremlin to follow this general pattern:

- Play its Sputnik diplomacy to the limit.

- Stand pat against all pressure in the areas now dominated by Communism.

- Insist either upon two-nation talks between the Soviet Union and the United States or demand that satellite powers sit beside Soviet conferees in numbers equal to the number of Allies sitting beside the Americans.

Never Tempt Them

Maintain at high pitch the work of trouble-making among the peoples of non-Communist nations.

- But softening this fifth column activity with some show of willingness to cooperate with governments over which the Kremlin exercises no control.

- Continue an effective foreign policy of "no strings" foreign aid toward nations which neither are Communist allies nor expected to become allies.

Amory evidently believes events of the next 15 years largely will shape the long haul pattern of the future, war or peace or whatever.

"We face a race for leadership in the world against militant Communists with fervent faith," he said. "We must never tempt them into a major military path while letting down our strength although they haven't got what it takes rationally to challenge us this spring."

Amory said the Russian leaders had no doubts on the future. In a comparatively short time they are confident that the Soviet Union will be tops—worldwide.

COPYRIGHT

Date:

Amory Has His Fingers On Communists' Pulse

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Robert

Amory Jr. probably is the second-best or third-best informed American on what the Russian Communists are doing, thinking and planning.

Amory is Deputy Chief for Intelligence of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). CIA is the United States spy apparatus or, in more polite language, it is a counter intelligence organization. This well informed American was making a speech the other day in Columbia, S. C. Amory's speech did not get the publicity it deserved despite the fact that what he had to say was pretty good news for U. S. citizens.

His story was that the Soviet Union is neither ready nor preparing for a war; that the Kremlin does not want a war although Communist Russia would fight if it must. Amory said the Russian leaders decided 18 months ago that their Communist economy had to have 15 years of peace to achieve their internal development plans.

"Their economy is by no means mobilized for war or preparing for war," Amory said. "They strike a balance between military and other expenditures just as we do." He believes the Soviet Union is not ready to risk a nuclear war over Berlin. Nikita Khrushchev, instead, thinks he can force the West to "chicken out."

CPYRGHT

CPYRGHT

MAR 25 1959

Approved For Release 2000/06/13 : CIA-RDP75-00001R000100190032-2

Circ. 141,072

From: Edit: Other:
Page: Page: Page:

Date:

CIA CHEF

'Soviets Want 15-Yr. Peace'

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press International

CPYRGHT

WASHINGTON, Mar. 25 (UPI)—Robert Amory, Jr., probably is the second best or third-best informed American on what the Russian communists are doing, thinking and planning.

Amory is deputy intelligence chief of Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), the United States spy apparatus or, more politely, counter-intelligence organization.

Amory was making a speech the other day in Columbia, S. C. It did not get the publicity it deserved, although what he said was good news for U. S. citizens.

NOT READY

His story was that the Soviet Union is neither ready nor preparing for a war; that the Kremlin does not want a war although Communist Russia would fight if it must. Amory said the Russian leaders decided 18 months ago that they needed 15 years of peace to achieve internal development plans.

He believes the Soviet Union is not ready to risk a nuclear war over Berlin.

Nikita Khrushchev, instead, thinks he can force the west to "chicken out."

THE PATTERN

During the 15 years of peace the CIA expects the Kremlin to follow this pattern:

—Play its sputnik diplomacy to the limit.

—Stand pat against all pressure in the areas now dominated by Communism.

—Insist either upon two-nation talks between the Soviet Union and the United States or demand that satellite powers sit beside Soviet conferees in numbers equal to the number of allies sitting beside the Americans.

—Maintain at high pitch the work of trouble-making among the peoples of non-communist nations.

—But softening this fifth column activity with some show of willingness to cooperate with governments over which the Kremlin exercises no control.

—Continue an effective foreign policy of "no strings" foreign aid toward nations which neither are communist allies nor expected to become allies.

CPYRGHT

Date:

Washington Window

CIA Official Has Good News for U. S. Citizens

By LYLE G. WILSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Robert Amory Jr., probably is the second-best or third-best informed American on what the Russian Communists are doing, thinking and planning.

Amory is deputy chief of intelligence of the Central Intelligence Agency, CIA is the United States spy apparatus and, in polite language, it is a premier intelligence organization.

This well informed American was making a speech the other day in Columbia, S.C. Amory's speech did not get the publicity it deserved despite the fact that what he had to say was pretty good news for U.S. citizens.

His story was that the Soviet Union is neither ready nor preparing for a war; that the Kremlin does not want a war although Communist Russia would fight if it must. Amory said the Russian leaders decided 18 months ago that their Communist economy had to have 15 years of peace to achieve their internal development plans.

Not Ready for War

"Their economy is by no means mobilized for war or preparing for war," Amory said. "They strike a balance between military and other expenditures just as we do."

He believes the Soviet Union is not ready to risk a nuclear war over Berlin. Nikita Khrushchev, instead, thinks he can force the West to "chicken out."

"If the West is resolute," Amory said, "then I believe that the Soviet Union will be the one to back down."

During the 15 years of peace which Amory is convinced the Soviet Union must have and urgently wants, the CIA expects the Kremlin to follow this general pattern:

—Play its Sputnik diplomacy to the limit.

—Stand out against all pressure in the world now dominated by Communism.

—Reject either super two-nation talks between the Soviet Union and the United States or demand that satellite powers sit beside Soviet congresses in numbers equal to the number of Allies sitting beside the Americans.

Never Tempt Them

—Maintain at high pitch the work of titanic making among the peoples of non-Communist nations.

—But softening this fifth-column activity with some show of willingness to cooperate with governments over which the Kremlin exercises no control.

—Continue an effective foreign policy of "no strings" foreign aid toward nations which neither are Communist allies nor expected to become allies.

—Amory evidently believes events of the next 15 years largely will shape the long haul pattern of the future, war or peace or whatever.

"We face a race for leadership in the world against militant Communists with fervent faith," he said. "We must never tempt them into a major military path while letting down our strength (although) they haven't got what it takes rationally to challenge us this spring."

Amory said the Russian leaders had no doubts on the future. In a comparatively short time they are confident that the Soviet Union will be tops—worldwide.

Classified Ads Bring Results

CPYRGHT

CPYRGHT

Good News for U.S.:

Soviets Not Ready For War Now, CIA Man Tells Audience

CPYRIGHT

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Robert Amory, probably the second-best or third-best informed American on what the Russian Communists are doing, thinking and planning.

Amory is deputy chief for intelligence of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). CIA is the United States spy apparatus or, in more polite language it is a counter intelligence organization.

This well informed American was making a speech the other day in Columbia, S.C. Amory's speech did not get the publicity it deserved despite the fact that what he had to say was pretty good news for U. S. citizens.

His story was that the Soviet Union is neither ready nor preparing for a war; that the Kremlin does not want a war although Communist Russia would fight if it must. Amory said the Russian leaders decided 18 months ago that their Communist economy had to have 15 years of peace to achieve their internal development plans.

"Their economy is by no means mobilized for war or preparing for war," Amory said. "They strike a balance between military and other expenditures just as we do."

He believes the Soviet Union is not ready to risk a nuclear war over Berlin. Nikita Khrushchev, instead, thinks he can force the West to "chicken out."

"If the West is resolute," Amory said, "then I believe that the Soviet Union will be the ones to back down."

Plan Outlined

During the 15 years of peace which Amory is convinced the Soviet Union must have and urgently wants, the CIA expects the Kremlin to follow this general pattern:

—Play its sputnik diplomacy to the limit.

—Stand pat against all pressure in the areas now dominated by Communism.

—Insist either upon two-nation talks between the Soviet Union and the United States or demand that satellite powers sit beside Soviet conferees in numbers equal to the number of allies sitting beside the Americans.

—Maintain at high pitch the work of trouble-making among the peoples of non-Communist nations.

—But softening this fifth column activity with some show of willingness to cooperate with governments over which the Kremlin exercises no control.

—Continue an effective foreign policy of "no strings" foreign aid toward nations which neither are Communist allies nor expected to become allies.

Pattern Will merge

Amory evidently believes events of the next 15 years largely will shape the long haul pattern of the future, war or peace or whatever.

"We face a race for leadership in the world against militant Communist with fervent faith," he said. "We must never tempt them into a major military path while letting down our strength (although they haven't got what it takes rationally to challenge us this spring.)"

Amory said the Russian leaders had no doubts on the future. In a comparatively short time they are confident that the Soviet Union will be tops—world-wide.

Front Page
Edit Page
Other Page

CPYRGHT

Backdown by Soviet On Berlin Is Forecast

CPYRGHT
Lyn G. Wilson
WASHINGTON (UPI) Robert

Amory Jr. probably is the second-best or third-best informed American on what the Russian Communists are doing, thinking and planning.

Amory is deputy chief for intelligence of the Central Intelligence Agency. CIA is the U. S. spy apparatus or, in more polite language, it is a counter-intelligence organization.

WILSON

This well informed American was making a speech the other day in Columbia, S. C. Amory's speech did not get the publicity it deserved despite the fact that what he had to say was pretty good news for U. S. citizens.

HIS STORY was that the Soviet Union is neither ready nor preparing for a war; that the Kremlin does not want a war although Communist Russia would fight if it must. Amory said the Russian leaders decided 18 months ago that their Communist economy had to have 15 years of peace to achieve their internal development plans.

"Their economy is by no means mobilized for war or preparing for war," Amory said. "They strike a balance between military and other expenditures just as we do."

He believes the Soviet Union is not ready to risk a nuclear war over Berlin. Nikita Khrushchev, instead, thinks he can force the West to chicken out.

shchev, instead, thinks he can force the West to chicken out.

DURING THE 15 years of peace which Amory is convinced the Soviet Union must have, and urgently wants, the CIA expects the Kremlin to follow this general pattern:

- Play its Sputnik diplomacy to the limit.
- Stand pat against all pressure in the areas now dominated by Communism.
- Insist either upon two-nation talks between the Soviet Union and the United States or demand that satellite powers sit beside Soviet conferees in numbers equal to the number of Allies sitting beside the Americans.
- Maintain at high pitch the work of trouble-making among the peoples of non-Communist nations.
- Continue an effective foreign policy of "no strings" foreign aid toward nations which neither are Communist allies nor expected to become allies.

Amory evidently believes events of the next 15 years largely will shape the long haul pattern of the future, war or peace or whatever.

"We face a race for leadership in the world against militant Communists with fervent faith," he said. "We must never tempt them into a major military path while letting down our strength (although) they haven't got what it takes rationally to challenge us this spring."

Date:

State Department Expert Had Good News for U.S. in SC Talk

COPYRIGHT

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Robert Amory Jr., probably is the second-best or third-best informed American on what the Russian Communists are doing, thinking and planning.

Amory is deputy chief for intelligence of the Central Intelligence Agency. CIA is the United States spy apparatus or, in more polite language, it is a counter-intelligence organization.

This well informed American was making a speech the other day in Columbia, S.C. Amory's speech did not get the publicity it deserved despite the fact that what he had to say was pretty good news for U.S. citizens.

His story was that the Soviet Union is neither ready nor preparing for a war; that the Kremlin does not want a war although Communist Russia would fight if it must. Amory said the Russian leaders decided 18 months ago that their Communist economy had to have 15 years of peace to achieve their internal development plans.

"Their economy is by no means mobilized for war or preparing for war," Amory said. "They strike a balance between military and other expenditures just as we do."

He believes the Soviet Union is not ready to risk a nuclear war over Berlin. Nikita Khrushchev, instead, thinks he can force the West to "chicken out."

"If the West is resolute," Amory said, "then I believe that the Soviet Union will be the ones to back down."

During the 15 years of peace which Amory is convinced the Soviet Union must have and urgently wants, the CIA expects the Kremlin to follow this general pattern:

Play its Sputnik diplomacy to the limit.

Stand pat against all pressure in the areas now dominated by Communism.

Insist either upon two-nation talks between the Soviet Union and the United States or demand that satellite powers sit beside Soviet conferees in numbers equal to the number of allies sitting beside the Americans.

Maintain at high pitch work of trouble-making among the peoples of non-Communist nations.

But softening this Fifth Column activity with such a willingness to cooperate with governments over which the Kremlin exercises no control.

MAR 25 1959

Circ: 15,363

S. 17,000 For Release 2000/06/13 : CIA-RDP75-00001R000100190032-2

CPYRIGHT

Front Page
Edit Page
Other Page

CPYRIGHT

Soviets Not Ready For War US Intelligence Man Says

WASHINGTON (UPI)

Amory Jr. probably is the second best or third-best informed American on what the Russian Communist are doing, thinking and planning.

Amory is deputy chief for intelligence of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). CIA is the United States spy apparatus or, in more polite language, it is a counter intelligence organization.

This well informed American was making a speech the other day in Columbia, S.C. Amory's speech did not get the publicity it deserved despite the fact that what he had to say was pretty good news for U. S. citizens.

His story was that the Soviet Union is neither ready nor preparing for a war; that the Kremlin does not want a war although Communist Russia would fight if it must. Amory said the Russian leaders decided 18 months ago that their Communist economy had to have 15 years of peace to achieve their internal development plans.

"Their economy is by no means mobilized for war or preparing for war," Amory said. "They strike a balance between military and other expenditures just as we do."

He believes the Soviet Union is not ready to risk a nuclear war over Berlin. Nikita Khrushchev, instead, thinks he can force the West to "chicken out."

"If the West is resolute," Amory said, "then I believe that the Soviet Union will be the ones to back down."

Plan Outlined

During the 15 years of peace which Amory is convinced the Soviet Union must have and urgently wants, the CIA expects the Kremlin to follow this general pattern:

- Play its sputnik diplomacy to the limit.
- Stand pat against all pressure in the areas now dominated by Communism.
- Insist either upon two-nation talks between the Soviet Union and the United States or demand that satellite powers sit beside Soviet conferees in numbers equal to the number of allies sitting beside the Americans.

—Maintain at high pitch the work of trouble-making among the peoples of non-Communist nations:

—But softening this fifth column activity with some show of willingness to cooperate with governments over which the Kremlin exercises no control.

—Continue an effective foreign policy of "no strings" foreign aid toward nations which neither are Communist allies nor expected to become allies.

Amory evidently believes events of the next 15 years largely will shape the long haul pattern of the future, war or peace or what ever.

"We face a race for leadership in the world against militant Communist with fervent faith," he said. "We must never tempt them into a major military path while letting down our strength although; they haven't got what it takes rationally to challenge us this spring."

Amory said the Russian leaders had no doubts on the future. In a comparatively short time they are confident that the Soviet Union will be top world-wide.